Settings

(insert description of the environment/world)

- Kid's Room
- City Building/Desert
- Length: 1 minute to 2 minutes(for now)

Characters

(insert a list of characters. EX: main character, side character, background character)

Character Notes from 3/6/2024:

Rig: <https://twigaarts20.gumroad.com//elivtc>

- Main character has 2 facial expressions, one for blank face one for talking
- Side and background characters all wearing facemasks to skip facial animating
- Can skip modeling the sniper, use point of view and sniper scope glare to give the impression one is there

Scene	Timestamp	Audio	Script	Storyboard vignettes	Setting	Storyboard Artist
1	00:00-00:01		Fade into a room with a child playing with his Lego. The child is kneeling, back to the camera (the child's face is not visible, and the Legos are barely seen). As the child plays, the camera pans to reveal the Lego city he has set up, complete with houses and Lego soldiers. When the child says "Soldier down, soldier down," zoom in towards the battlefield, marking the transition from real life to the battlefield (the child's imagination).	1. Semi-subjective shot (from behind) of the child playing with his Lego.	The bedroom has a bed, a small desk, and a wardrobe. The child is playing with his Lego on a rug. A window above the desk and some posters hanging on the wall. Maybe some figures on his desktop.	Jordyne Tarver
	00:01-00:04			2. A medium close-up shot clearly shows the child and all his Lego toys. A previous camera pan reveals this.
	00:04-00:07			3. Bird's-eye view shot showing the child playing from above. The camera quickly zooms in on the Lego to transition to the battlefield.
2	00:07-00:09		A soldier is trapped in a ruined house, leaning against a wall, clearly tired and wounded. He is wearing a United States Army uniform (for example). The soldier looks out a nearby window and quickly hides upon hearing an explosion.	4. Medium close-up shot of the soldier sitting on the floor, with a destroyed window in the background showing smoke and hinting at the war outside.	The room is nearly empty, with some small debris on the floor. With the soldier sitting against the wall, the window is to his right, and the destroyed door is to his left.	Jordyne Tarver
	00:09-00:12			5. Subjective shot (from behind) of the soldier peeking out the window to assess the situation outside.

3	00:12-00:14		A sniper is lying on the rooftop of a nearby five-story building, also from the United States Army. The sniper aims with his weapon, and we	6. (Cut) Medium long shot of the sniper lying on the rooftop with his weapon, showing part of the rooftop and the sniper facing forward.	The building is in moderately good condition. The sniper is lying on a ledge of the rooftop that has been destroyed, from where he inserts his weapon to aim and take advantage of his height. The city is a war-torn city, with lots of smoke everywhere, occasional explosions, and almost constant sounds of machine gun fire.	Gavin Dobson
	00:14-00:16		see what he sees through the scope, namely, the house where the soldier is hidden.	7. (Cut) The general shot through the scope, showing a large part of the city and the hidden soldier slightly through the window.

4	00:16-00:19		The sniper sees the soldier and then communicates with him through a microphone. The camera will focus on him from behind, so he will put his hand to his ear to indicate opening communication or closing it (if he removes his hand from his ear). He tells the soldier, "Soldier, how are you?" to which the soldier responds with gestures of pain, "Severely wounded, I need to reach the base." The sniper replies, "I'll try to cover you, as you come out, there's a car to your left. Try to start it and get out of there as you can."	8. Semi-subjective shot of the sniper, focusing on him from behind, to speak with the soldier. 9. Medium close-up shot of the soldier receiving the sniper's words. 10. Alternating with a slightly low-angle shot of the sniper with his mouth covered by his weapon.	It has the same setting as before, alternating with the rooftop, general view of the city, and the house where the soldier is. Each time there is a semi-subjective shot of the sniper, the city is slightly visible. Gavin Dobson is doing these shots.	Gavin Dobson
	00:19-00:21

5	00:24-00:26		The soldier crouches out of the house and begins a short sequence shot until he reaches the car.	11. Medium close-up shot that follows the character to the door of the house.	When the soldier leaves the house, to his right is the thickness of the enemy army (some tanks, soldiers with machine guns and rifles), so he has to flee to the other side. This way, the character will move from left to right according to the sniper's view. There will also be a car nearby, about 3 or 4 houses away (so he has to run a bit, and the tracking shot is long). As before, some explosions (mines) and gunfire were on the ground.	Matt Ma
	00:26-00:29 00:31-00:34		Along the way, he will dodge bullets and explosions, and you will see people dying around him until he reaches the car.	12. Once he has crossed the door, a general shot travels laterally following the soldier's run to the car.
	00:29-00:31		There will be a perspective shot of the sniper watching the soldier run to the car.	13. General shot through the scope, showing a large part of the city and the soldier running.
6	00:34-00:36		The soldier gets into the car as he can, starts it, and begins to drive.	14. General shot of the soldier getting into the car. The soldier and the car are fully visible, and the battlefield is slightly visible.	The car's interior resembles an SUV, with high seats and military touches.	Matt Ma
	00:36-00:39			15. Medium close-up shot from the soldier's passenger seat touching car devices to start it.
	00:39-00:41			16. A detailed shot of the soldier connecting some cables that make the car start.

7	00:41-00:43		The sniper sees the soldier getting into the car and moves his scope to the right, revealing an enemy tank approaching the soldier's car.	17. General shot through the scope, showing a large part of the city and the soldier's car.	The street where the tank is located is the same as the entire street. A lot of debris is on the ground, making it difficult for any vehicle to drive down the street. There is also a lot of smoke and dust everywhere.	Beaumont Zhang
	00:43-00:47			18. General shoots through the scope, showing a large part of the city and the enemy tank after the camera pans to the right, indicating the sniper's movement.
8	00:47-00:49		The sniper warns the soldier about the tank, saying, "Careful, you have a tank at your twelve o'clock" (the sniper is not shown); the soldier responds, "I can't do anything," the sniper replies, "Don't worry, just try to dodge the explosion." Then, the sniper takes out some special bullets and loads his sniper rifle, aims at a weak point of the tank, and shoots, causing the tank to explode.	19. A semi-subjective shot from the back seat shows the soldier driving and what's ahead (the tank approaching in the distance).	The tank is robust and has a fairly long barrel, although it is slightly damaged, which is why the sniper's bullets work.	Beaumont Zhang
	00:49-00:52 00:52-00:54 00:54-00:56			20. Every time the soldier talks to the sniper, a medium close-up shot from the soldier's passenger seat.
	00:56-00:59			21. Slightly low-angle and sideways shot of the sniper removing the bullets from his weapon and putting the explosive ones.
	00:59-01:03			22. General shot through the scope aiming at the tank.
	01:03-01:09			23. General shot of the tank explosion when the sniper shoots.

	01:09-01:11			24. A semi-subjective shot from the back seat shows the soldier driving and what's ahead (the tank exploding).
9	01:11-01:13		The soldier tries to dodge the explosion but crashes his car in the process. He has to get out of it and hide under a ruined house's small porch. The sniper no longer has sight of the soldier and tells him, "I don't have a visual, soldier. You're on your own; good luck." The soldier is bleeding heavily and is mortally wounded.	1. There is a detailed shot of the soldier swerving and trying to dodge the tank.	The porch is a kind of balcony on the ground floor of a house, and the soldier is hiding underneath. The atmosphere is filled with dust and ash from the explosion. Almost nothing can be seen.	Nate Dalrymple
	01:13-01:16			2. A general shot shows the car crashing into a pile of debris on the side of the street.
	01:16-01:18			3. Just as the car crashes, a medium close-up shot from the soldier's passenger seat shows the impact.
	01:18-01:25			4. Low-angle shot following the soldier crawling to the porch.
	01:25-01:29			5. Medium long shot showing the soldier sitting against the porch wall in the same position as at the beginning.

10	01:29-01:31		The soldier, in a desperate act, tries to stand up and kill as many enemies as possible before dying. While shouting, he kills a few enemies until an enemy soldier shoots him. It is seen that the bullet is about to hit him, but at that moment, the scene stops.	1. Extreme close-up shot of the soldier's expression of pain. He has decided to give his life for the cause.	The scene is filled with dust and ash, chaotic. The ground is full of debris and obstacles. The surrounding houses are entirely in ruins.	Nate Dalrymple
	01:31-01:33			2. There is a full shot of the soldier getting up from the ground with his weapon.
	01:33-01:45			3. Alternating concise shots (semi-subjective, total) of the soldier shooting and other soldiers being shot (this and the following shots are in slow motion).
	01:45-01:48			4. Short shot of an enemy soldier aiming and shooting (slow motion).
	01:48-01:52			5. Tracking shot of the bullet approaching the soldier (slow motion).

11	01:52-01:54		The boy has in his hand the soldier who was about to die when his mother suddenly enters and says, "Darling, dinner is ready, come." The boy puts down the Lego and leaves the room. The door closes, and the camera pans to an overhead shot of the fallen soldier lying on his back, looking at the camera. As the camera slowly zooms in, the short film ends with a fade to black.	Medium close-up shot showing the boy and all his Lego toys, with the mother entering the room from behind.	The setting is the same bedroom as before, but the Legos have been slightly rearranged, and the houses are more in ruins.	Max Comer
	01:54-01:57			Medium long shot of the mother talking to the boy.
	01:57-02:01			Static wide shot of the room until the boy leaves and closes the door.
	02:01-02:05			The camera pans to the soldier, with an overhead shot zooming in, and the short film ends with a fade to black.

Victor's Idea

- Kid playing with legos
- Goes into his imagination
- Soldier is hiding in a house
- Sniper speaks with him
- Soldier tries to run to a car
- A tank appears at the end of the screen
- The sniper bombs the tank
- The soldier smashes the car
- The soldier gets out of the car wounded
- Soldier shoots enemies
- Before the soldiers get hit, there is a cut
- Kid's mum appears telling the kid to eat dinner

In a closed room, a child is playing with his Lego toys. The child moves his toys and manages the figures (it's a Lego city, styled after Iraq, with Lego military vehicles, tanks, and small-sized guns). The child whispers, "Man down, man down. Severely wounded," as the camera pans and zooms into the battlefield, revealing a soldier trapped in a ruined house amidst the battlefield. This soldier is in contact with a sniper partner to add dynamism and another perspective to the scene. The soldier must escape with the sniper's help. The man is leaning against one of the walls, hand on his stomach covering one of his wounds, next to a window through which the massacre outside can be intuited, with sounds of bombs and gunfire (this scene could be shot with a green screen). The soldier tells the sniper over the mic that he's going to try to make it back to base (on screen, a shot shows the sniper lying on a tall building with a wide view of the city, including where the soldier is hidden). The sniper responds, "Don't worry, I've got you covered. As you come out, there's a car to your left, try to get on it and get out of there." The man quickly leaves the house and, half-crouching tries to run towards the car. Along the way, he dodges some bullets and tank shells that make him stagger. In the end, he manages to reach the car. The scene alternates with some scenes of the sniper taking down people running in the street or on a terrace. The soldier barely manages to get into the car, starts, and begins the escape. In the distance, a tank is seen approaching the soldier. The sniper tells the soldier, "I'm going to try my new toy." He loads his sniper rifle and inserts an explosive bullet.

He aims at the tank and shoots the bullet through an opening in the tank, causing it to explode and create a lot of smoke (all this escape occurs on one of the streets; the idea is that the houses are half-destroyed, showing it's an area heavily affected by war. Lots of rubble and ash everywhere, making it hard to see). From there, the soldier manages to dodge the explosion (this could be done with a real car and green screens where the tank explosion is already recorded; we need to ask Carlos). The car breaks down after hitting some debris on the ground, smoke comes out of the car, and the soldier has to get out. He crawls towards a house, under a porch, and the damaged car explodes from the gasoline leaking from the crash (the crash could be filmed in a real car with a hard brake and a green screen background showing the backdrop). The sniper takes down a couple of enemies who are going to kill the soldier while the soldier covers himself and tries to shoot back. Finally, the soldier makes a desperate run to try to get back to base, and after running a few meters, an enemy soldier hits him; he falls to the ground, looking up, and the sniper kills the enemy. The soldier looks up at the sky, a landscape with red hues and much smoke. A bird's-eye view camera pulls away from the soldier lying on the ground as the sniper shouts in the background, "Man down, man down," words that mix with the voice of the child just as his mother enters the room to tell him, "Come on, honey, dinner's ready." The child leaves his room, and the camera returns to the Lego set, where a Lego soldier is seen face-up in the scene. With a fade to black, while slowly zooming in on the Lego figure, the short film ends.

Including the sniper scenes is key to adding dynamism to the short film, allowing the viewer to breathe and greatly aiding the editing. It sets an arrhythmic pace to provoke confusion (a mix of short and long shots).
